A QUICK LOOK

This certificate will provide you with the skills for a promising career to be working in a skills shortage field: Disability. Your future clients can realise their overall potential, be better engaged with their own communities and strive for their life goals with your professional assistance.

Job Prospects:

- Aged Care Worker
- Personal Care Giver
- Residential Ageing Support Worker

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This aged care qualification will offer learners with the skills and knowledge to provide person-centred approach to people who may require support due to ageing, disability or some other reasons. Work involves using discretion and judgement in relation to individual support as well as taking responsibility for own outputs.

Students will learn to assist clients to maximise and maintain independence and build well-being. Training and assessment will ensure learners are able to work legally and ethically with a diverse range of people, with the scope of practice for a support worker, applying a holistic person-centred approach and providing safe healthy support in a direct care environment.

Unit Details:
